FOUND DEAD SUNDAY

William O'Hearn Found Dead Outside of Home by Women Passersby

CAUSE OF DEATH UNKNOWN

Was Night Watchman at Oetting Ice House for Five Years and Was Well Known About Town

Sunday afternoon between the hours of four and five o'clock, Mrs. Wm. Schenning, wife of the manager of the Oetting Bros. ice house at Channel Lake, and a lady friend who were strolling along in the woods near the lake, were horrified to suddenly come upon the body of a man lying on the ground close to the Pat Hughes cottage. With all possible speed they hurried back to the ice house and gave the alarm. Upon investigation the body proved to be that of William O'Hearn, known to many by the name of "Bill Cook."

For the past four years and six months O'Hearn has been employed by Oetting Bros. as night watchman at their Channel lake house and it is stated by the manager that in that length of time he was nightly on duty and was considered a faithful and trustworthy employee. Thus showing that although he had at one time been a hard drinker he had somewhat reformed and that liquor was not responsible for his death.

About a week ago he complained of not feeling well and told his employer that he was unable to work, but at the time he did not appear to be very sick and nothing more was thought of it. As near as can be learned the last time that he was seen alive was Friday afternoon when Herb Pierce noticed him walking slowly along the road near his home and as he lived alone in the Pat Hughes cottage and was not discovered until Sunday afternoon it is impossible to say when his death occurred although it was quite evident that he had been dead for some time when found.

When found he was fully dressed with the exception of his shoes and at his hand was a hard pill partially filled with water showing that in all probability he had stepped outside to get a drink and had either suddenly dropped dead or had been too exhausted to again get inside.

The coroner was summoned and arrived Monday forenoon when the inquest was held, the verdict being "that the deceased came to his death from natural causes." Upon his person was found a silver watch and $3.45 in money. A search of the house revealed a certificate of deposit in the State Bank of Antioch for the sum of $20.00. A week ago Wednesday he received from Oetting Bros. a check on the Casper State Bank of Chicago to the amount of $45.00, but up to the present time this check has not been located. And he was also said to have $10.00 still due from the company. A couple of years ago he purchased of Wm. Tiffany a lot for $200 upon which $50 had been paid.

He was a man of about fifty-five or sixty years of age and has lived in and about Antioch for the past sixteen years. He claimed to have been an orphan from childhood and although he had a brother they had become separated and had not heard of each other in years.

Undertaker White had charge of the body and a funeral was held at the White home Wednesday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. The remains were interred in the Hillside cemetery.

Archaeological Discovery.

A record of very great interest concerning the celebrated siege of Jerusalem by Vespasian's army, under the command of Titus, has been discovered in upper Egypt, consisting of a wooden panel, with raised borders, or frame, bearing a Latin inscription of some fifty lines, of which thirty-seven are still perfectly legible. Apart from its historical importance this relic, with the exception of the tablets found at Pompeii, containing some accounts of a banker there, is the most valuable specimen ever found.

Extravagant Economy.

Economy often consists in doing without something you want now in order to get something you don't want in the future.

A LITTLE CHILD IS TAKEN

Only Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Van Patten Dies After Short Illness

Wednesday afternoon between the hours of two and three o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Van Patten were called upon to part with their eldest child, little Clarice.

The little one was three years of age last August and her illness was of only a few days duration the first symptoms of sickness appearing last Saturday night. From the first she was known to be in a very critical condition and no hopes for her recovery were held. A trained nurse was sent for and arrived Tuesday night and all within the power of medical skill was done to relieve the little sufferer but to no avail and on Wednesday she quietly breathed her last.

Her illness is supposed to have been caused by the little one having unknown to her parents, eaten some poisonous substance that prevented the various organs of the body from performing their natural functions, and had poisoned the entire system.

The funeral services will be held at the M. E. church Saturday afternoon at one o'clock. Rev. A. O. Stixrud will officiate and the burial will be in the Hillside cemetery.

The bereaved parents have the sympathy of all in their sorrow.

TELEPHONE WIRE OVER ROAD INFLECTS INJURIES

Edward Ingalls of the Ingalls livery and Chief of Police Robert B. Connolly of the Waukegan police department had a narrow escape from being decapitated by a telephone wire Thursday at a sharp turn in a county road between Antioch and the State line road. As it is, Ingalls suffered a bad cut in the neck and a mark where the wire "burned" him from ear to ear, while the chief of police is likewise marked but not so badly.

The wire had in some manner fallen down over the road at the turn. It was quite low, fastened at both ends, and quite hidden by shrubbery. The automobile party had been at Allendale school and was working about the county looking at horses for a Chicago livery. Leaving the straight road the car, too the turn. The wire caught the hood, snapped off, and hit Connolly and Ingalls in the neck. Only the fact that the car was going at the slow rate of about five miles an hour saved them from possible decapitation, and as it was Ingalls' wound is near the jugular.

The party left the car and cut the wire which is one of the Farmers' telephone line. In the party were Edward Ingalls, driver; Chief of Police Connolly, Deputy Coroner Edward Conrad, Max Klarkowsky and Assistant Fire Marshal Austin Hutton.

MABEL KING MARRIED AT WAUKEGAN

Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Ray at Waukegan occurred the marriage of the latter's niece Miss Mabel King of this place to Albert Bogges, of Waukegan only immediate relatives being present.

The bride is the eldest daughter of Mrs. Libbie King of this place and has lived her entire life in this vicinity where she has a large number of friends to wish her an abundance of happiness through life.

The groom is quite well known hereabouts having been employed by Chas. Smith as a bus driver during the past summer, about a month ago he went to Waukegan where he secured a good position in the calf meal factory.

Mr. and Mrs. Bogges will make their future home in Waukegan.

Their many friends are extending congratulations.

City Pupils to Study Farming.

A new study—that of farming—is to be added to the public school curriculum at the next school term and the board of estimate has granted $2,200 for the preparatory work in getting the little farms ready. Farming implements, seed and other things will be purchased for planting the spring crops, and the youngsters of the east side and other congested parts of the city will be taught to differentiate rutabaga from flax and to know beans in the pod at sight.—New York Sun.

Use of Precious Metals.

Few persons realize what an enormous amount of the precious metals and even precious stones, such as diamonds, are used in the manufacture of telephone apparatus. In a single year one company uses upward of a ton of platinum for this class of apparatus alone. And platinum costs 30 per cent. more than pure gold, demonstrating that this expensive metal would not be used so extensively unless results justified it.

TO ISSUE NEW STOCK

Stockholders of Old Settlers Club to Add to Property at Paddocks Lake

WILL ERECT NEW BUILDINGS

Stock Will be Increased to $8,000 in Order to Make the Contemplated Additions to Grounds and Buildings

Charles M. Bishop, secretary of the Old Settlers Club of Kenosha county, has issued a call for a meeting of all of the stockholders of the club to be held in the court house in Kenosha on the afternoon of Nov. 19th at which time action will be taken to increase the stock of the club to $8,000 and to make provision for the erection of new buildings on the property of the club at Paddock's Lake. It is proposed to build a home for the care taker of the grounds and with the erection of this home it is expected that the care taker will remain on the grounds at all times and that the club will be able to secure some revenue from the rent of the grounds for use of picnic parties. A general overhauling of the buildings on the grounds is also proposed. The fences will be rebuilt and the buildings will be placed in first class condition in every way.

The season just closing was one of the worst in the history of the organization on account of the fact that rain fell in torrents on both days set aside for picnics at the grounds and no money was realized from the picnics. This is the first year since the organization of the club that both of the annual gatherings were failures. Notwithstanding the fact that the club has had no income this year from the picnics there is still a small amount of money in the treasury and the issuance of the new stock is to be made for the purpose of taking care of permanent improvements rather than for the payment of the running expenses of the organization. It is thought that it will be an easy matter to dispose of the new stock as the present stock in the organization is held by only a few men. In order to issue the stock it is necessary to have a vote of two-thirds of the stockholders in favor of the proposition.

The question of building new buildings was discussed at the annual meeting of the board of directors and all of the directors were favorable to the plan.

There has been a suggestion that a memorial hall be erected on the grounds of the old settlers club but this suggestion has not met with great favor on account of the fact that most of the people interested in the preservation of the memorials of the county believe that they should be taken care of in the city where they would be more available to the people of the entire county.

PRIMARY LAW IS UPHELD

The Supreme Court dismissed the petition for mandamus, directing canvassing boards to certify three candidates for houses in each district. This means that the primary law is upheld.

This ruling of the Supreme Court upholds the plan of plumping votes for the Legislature at the primary and knocks out the plan of men who sought to have the three high men in the Republican party at the recent primary, placed on the official election ballot. In other words, as regards Lake, McHenry and Boone counties, Shurtleff, Vickers and Burns (Dem.) go on the ballot. Under the other plan, Jackson being third high Republican men, would have been ordered on the ballot. The ruling of the court is final and sets at rest much talk and speculation.

Sterilizing Wound in Electric Oven.

Electric sterilizing ovens at first used only for the sterilization of dental and surgical instruments are now used to some extent to sterilize stubborn wounds or ulcers. The heat penetrates the tissues in a way that surface antiseptics cannot, and even though the temperature is run up to 500 degrees F., which is nearly 300 degrees higher than the boiling point of water, the skin is not scorched. As the heat increases in the oven, the skin of the patient protects itself by throwing off a profuse perspiration which prevents scorching.

BLOOD MONEY CLUB

New Club to be Formed in Waukegan to Fleece Candidates

LOOKS LIKE HOLD UP GAME

Reported That Steps May Have Been Taken to Have 150 Men Support Candidate Who Puts Up Most Money

Prospective office seekers in Waukegan have heard with considerable interest during the past few days of a movement afoot in the wire works which has as its purpose, the actual "holding up" of candidates in order to obtain the support of members of the club to be formed.

The report has gone out that 150 well known men of the wire mills, who class themselves as some leaders in politics, who can swing a few votes each, have taken steps which have in mind the formation of a club, in which all members will "stick together to the finish and vote only for those candidates whom the club endorses."

The idea further, according to those who have heard of it, is that the club will endorse candidates without regard to ability or fitness for the office they seek, the endorsement of the club to be obtained through one means only, the man who pays the most will have the club's endorsement.

For instance, if Jones offers $150 to the club for its endorsement, the club will give it to him unless somebody else comes across more—and the money will be divided among the members equally.

In case some man should offer them $500, why they will of course endorse him.

The plan is to have the club act on every candidate who may approach the members and whatever man is endorsed will get not only every one of the 150 votes of the club members but also of all the friends in the mills and elsewhere that the members can swing.

While the proposed plan seems the most raw of the kind that has ever been advanced, and the informant is a man who declares he was approached with a proposition to join the club and turned it down hard because of the low-lived suggestion.

It is stated that candidates who have heard of the plan have decided that they will not entertain such an offer at all, that, if approached on such a proposition, they will merely tell the promoters that they do not care for their support or to have anything to do with them. It is also stated that in the case of some men who heard of the plan and who work at the mill, that they will not back up any such move but that, in case they hear of an endorsement of such a club, they will get out and work for the fellow who does not have the endorsement. In other words, they refuse to stand for the proposition of helping elect the man who may have the most money to purchase his way into office.—Gazette.

EXPLODING LAMP SETS FIRE TO BOYS' CLOTHING

Friday evening of last week George, the eight years old son of E. E. Shannon of Channel met with a serious and what barely missed being a fatal accident. By mistake a lamp had been filled with gasoline instead of kerosene with the result that when the lamp was lit there was an explosion throwing the burning oil over the boy and igniting his clothing. Before assistance could be rendered the frightened child ran from the house, each step only serving to fan the flames into greater activity. Mr. Shannon was away from home at the time and only the children were present but they quickly overtook the burning child and soon extinguished the flames. A physician was called and found that while the little fellow was severely burned about the back, neck and arms his injuries were not fatal. At the present time he is getting along quite nicely.

Pleasant News for Author.

A local author went to the library to get a copy of his own latest book. He had a friend with him. "Is 'Fate and Fusing' in?" he inquired. "Yes, sir," answered the librarian, promptly. "But how do you know without looking?" "It's never been out yet!"—Cleveland Leader.

SWALLOWS A NEEDLE

Mrs. Frank of Waukegan Suffers Painful Injury While Eating

Mrs. M. Frank of Waukegan was the victim of a peculiar and painful accident while she was in the act of eating her dinner Sunday afternoon. On the bill of fare was a fine bunch of celery and Mrs. Frank was munching a stalk of the vegetable, when the other members of the family were alarmed to see her face suddenly turn a purple hue while she gasped for breath.

Others in the room hastened to the side of the stricken woman and pounded her on the back in the hope of restoring her breath. All their efforts were in vain, however, and they hastened to summon a doctor. Dr. Foley responded to the call and on a hasty examination found that the woman in eating the celery had taken into her throat a short needle or a small piece of glass.

The doctor worked over the woman for a long time, but could not locate the foreign substance in the throat. He succeeded in restoring her breathing to a mere normal condition, but still she was in extreme pain.

Had the doctor not arrived when he did it is evident that the woman would have choked to death, as her face had turned a deep purple and she was fast becoming unconscious. Her throat is swollen and inflamed, and she is unable to swallow anything at all as yet. The doctor is waiting for the swelling to go down and then he will turn the X-ray on the woman to see if he can locate the trouble.

It is thought that the needle or piece of glass was put in the celery when it was small and grew there, as the vegetable was washed carefully before it was put on the table. Whatever it was, it has lodged on the left side of the throat and is giving the woman much pain.

HATTIE SCHILKE RECIPIENT OF KITCHEN SHOWER

Miss Hattie Schilke was much surprised on Monday evening when she discovered that her friends had secretly planned a kitchen shower in her honor. So carefully were their plans laid that it was not until the guests arrived each laden with some article of usefulness about the kitchen that she had even a slight inkling of the affair. Although much surprised the hostess made her guests heartily welcome and the evening was most pleasantly spent in games after which refreshments were served. Among the many useful articles of which she was the recipient were a dish pan, coal scuttle, clothes line and pins, spice cabinet, flour sifter, pudding dish, broiler, potato ricer, set of flat irons and a number of granite and aluminum pans, basins, etc. Among those present were: the Misses Gertie and Pauline Smart, Mabel Bregan, Alice Emmons, Minnie, Ada, and Pearl Lux, Ollie Tiffany, Gertie Felter, Florence Bregan, Cora Hooper, Jennie Sibley, Elizabeth Webb, and Hattie and Mary Schilke, and Mesdames Lera McNeil, Laura DuFree, Eva Kaye, Susie Webb and Margaret Hockney.

The Judicial Jumping Jack. A jumping jack once jumped so judiciously that the boys judged him of sufficient importance to be a jurist, and so they jolled him into making a job at a judicial position. The jumping jack jumped at the chance and justified the judgment of his friends by judging justly everything in his jurisdiction and causing the jury to suggest judgment in cases where justice had been jumbled about by the glances of joking judges.

EIGHT CENT MILK

Retail Dealers in Waukegan to Raise the Price on November 1st.

RECORD NOTCH FOR MILK

Farmers Shove Up Price to Retail Dealer—Is the Reason Assigned for Raising Price to Consumer

Waukegan will have 8-cent milk this winter for the first time in its history. The price will be raised from 7 to 8 cents on November 1st and will continue at that price until May 1st at the earliest.

The increased price is due to the increased price per can as demanded by farmers from the local retailers. And the farmers attribute their raise in price to the scarcity of feed and the almost impossibility of getting sufficient feed for their cattle.

Here is the official notice of the increase in wholesale prices, which brings up the retail price to the consumer:

"A committee of the Waukegan Milk Producers' Association met with the Milk Dealers Monday night and the following schedule of prices was agreed upon for the coming six months:

November, $1.50 per can; December, $1.45 per can; January, $1.40 per can; February, $1.35 per can; March, $1.30 per can; April, $1.20 per can.

The above schedule for the six months makes an average of $1.36 2-3 per can, the highest figure ever paid farmers for milk in Waukegan.

It is noticed that one month, November, sees a price of $1.50 per can, this being the highest figure ever attained for milk in this section.

For comparison's sake, the price paid the farmers for the previous six months is given here:

May, 85 cents; June 80 cents; July, $1.00; August, $1.10; September, $1.05; October, $1.05. Average per month, 97 1-2 cents.

The cans contain 32 quarts so the price for the past six months was 97 1-2 cents for 32 quarts and now for the next six months it will be $1.36 2-3. The highest previous average was $1.27.

Farmers declare the price of feed makes it almost impossible to properly feed their cattle. One farmer declares that he is now paying $400 a carload for feed that a few years ago he could buy for $200. Good help is also almost unobtainable says another.

Another declares that he has already fed out half of his winter feed on account of the dried up condition of his pastures.

Asked about the prospects of a raise in the retail price one dealer said. The price will surely go up the first of November. The farmers have forced us to it by the increase in the wholesale price. If we didn't get 8 cents a quart we would have to quit business. We will likely get 9 cents for a pint of cream where we are now getting 8.

The price of $1.50 for November is the highest by 20 cents that has ever been paid by a dealer in Waukegan. Waukegan is not alone as nearly all the other cities are experiencing the same advance in price.

A Preventive Measure. Six-year-old Harriet announced her intention of giving up her German lessons with Fraulein.

"She hugs and kisses me all the time I'm at lessons, and sigh—I do hate Dutch," Harriet explained.

Father, who is something of a diplomat, reasoned with her: "See here, my little girl, I have read German and French with Fraulein ever since I was your age and she has never tried to hug and kiss me."

"Father," observed the child dryly, "you had better touch wood."—Success.

His Awful "Break."

The little god of bad breaks is ever seeking victims. He made a young man at a social gathering the other evening blush for a week. The young man had been introduced to a young woman. "Why, I know a lady by the same name in Kansas City," he remarked, "only she's a beautiful girl." The young woman froze him to the spot, and he was glad of an excuse to leave the gathering.

Hard Fate.

There is no one so miserable in the world as the unprepared man, the un-equipped man.

The Courage of Captain Plum

SYNOPSIS.

Capt. Nathaniel Plum, of the sloop Typhoon, lands secretly on Beaver Island, stronghold of the Mormons. He is suddenly confronted by Obadiah Price, an eccentric old man and a member of the Mormon council, who tells him that he is expected. Price ignores Nat's protestations that he has got the wrong man, and bargains for the annulment of the sloop. He binds Nat by a solemn oath to deliver a package to Franklin Pierce, president of the United States. Near Price's cabin Nat sees the frightened face of a young woman who disappears in the darkness, leaving an odor of lilacs. It develops that Plum's visit to the island is to demand settlement from the king, Strang, for the looting of his ship some time previously, supposedly by Mormon Casey, the mate, has been left in charge of the sloop with orders to bombard St. James if Nat does not return within a certain time. Price takes Nat in the darkness, to the king's home, and through a window he sees the king and his wives, among whom is the lady of the lilacs, whom Price says is the seventh wife. Plum calls at the king's office, where he is warned by a young woman that his life is in danger. Strang receives Plum cordially, professes indignation when he hears the captain's grievance, and promises to punish the guilty. Plum again receives warning of his danger. He rescues Nell, who is being publicly whipped, and escapes with her. Strang, the sheriff and father of Winsome, the girl who warned Nat, to pursue and kill the two men. Plum and Nell plan to escape on the Typhoon. Plum learns that Marion, the girl of the lilacs, is Nell's sister. She is not yet married to Strang. Plum suggests carrying her off on the ship. Nell approves.

Horror, not fear, sent an involuntary shiver through Nathaniel. "They can't reach us!" assured Nell. There was the glitter of triumph in his eyes. "This was to have been my way of escape after I killed Strang. A quarter of a mile deeper in the swamp I have a canoe." He picked up the gun and box and began forcing his way through the dense alder along the edge of the stream. "I'd like to stay and murder those dogs," he called back, "but it wouldn't be policy."

For a time the crashing of their bodies through the dense growth of the swamp drowned all other sound. Five minutes later Nell stopped on the edge of a wide bog. The howls were giving fierce tongue in the forest on their left and their nearest sent Nathaniel's hand to his pistol. Nell saw the movement and laughed.

"Don't like the sound, eh?" he said. "We got used to it on Beaver Island. They're just about at the place where they tore little Jim Schredder to pieces a few weeks back. Schredder tried to kill one of the elders for stealing his wife while he was away on a night's fishing trip."

He plunged to his knees in the bog. "They caught him just before he reached the swamp," he flung back over his shoulder. "Two minutes more and he would have been safe."

Nathaniel, sinking to his knees in the mire, forged up beside him.

"Lord!" he exclaimed, as a breath of air brought a sudden burst of blood-curdling cries to them. "If they'd loosed them on us sooner—"

He shivered at the terrible grimace Nell turned on him.

"Had they slipped the leashes when we escaped, we would have been with poor Schredder now, Captain Plum. By the way," he stopped a moment to wipe the water and mud from his face—"three days after they covered Schredder's bones with muck out there, the elder told Schredder's wife! She was too pretty for a fisherman!"

He started on, but halted suddenly with uplifted hand. No longer could they hear the baying of the dogs. "They've struck the creek!" said Nell. "Listen!"

After an interval of silence there came a long mournful howl.

"Tread—tread or in the water, that's what the howling means. How Croche and his devils are howling now!"

A curse was mingled with Nell's breath as he forced his way through the bog. Twenty rods farther on they came to a slimy covered bit of water on which was floating a dugout canoe. Immense relief replaced the anxiety in Nathaniel's face as he climbed into it. At that moment he was willing to fight a hundred men for Marion's sake, but snakes and bogs and bloodhounds were entirely outside his pale of argument and he exhibited no hesitation in betraying this fact to his companion. For a quarter of a mile Nell forced the dugout through water viscid with slime and rotted substance before the clearer channel of the creek was reached. As they progressed the stream constantly became deeper and more navigable until it finally began to show signs of a current and a little later, under the powerful impetus of Nell's paddle, the canoe shot from between the dense shores into the open lake. A mile away Nathaniel discerned the point of forest beyond which the Typhoon was hidden. He pointed out the location of the ship to his companion.

"You are sure there is a small boat waiting for you on the point?" asked Nell.

"Yes, since early morning."

Nell was absorbed in thought for some time as he drove the canoe through the tall rice grass that grew thick along the edge of the shore.

"How would it be if I landed you on the point and met you tonight at Obadiah's?" he asked suddenly. "It is probable that after we get Marion aboard your ship I will not return to the island again, and it is quite necessary that I run down the coast for a couple of miles—for—" He did not finish his reason, but added: "I can make the whole distance in this rice so there is no danger of being seen. Or you might lie off the point yonder and I would join you early this evening."

"That would be a better plan if we must separate," said Nathaniel, whose voice betrayed the reluctance with which he assented to the project. He had guessed shrewdly at Nell's motive. "Is it possible that we may have another young lady passenger?" he asked hesitatingly.

There was no answering humor to this in Nell's eyes.

"I wish we might!" he said quietly. "We can!" exclaimed Nathaniel. "My ship—"

"It is impossible. I am speaking of Winsome. Arbor Croche's house is in the heart of the town and guarded by dogs. I doubt if she would go, anyway. She has always been like a little sister to Marion and me and she has come to believe—something—as we do. I hate to leave her."

"Obadiah told me about her mother," ventured Nathaniel. "He said that some day Winsome will be a queen."

"I knew her mother," replied Nell, "as though he had not heard Nathaniel's last words. He looked frankly into the other's face. 'I worshipped her!'"

"Oh-h-h!"

"From a distance," he hastened. "She was as pure as Winsome is now. Little Winn looks like her. Some day she will be as beautiful."

"She is beautiful now."

"But she is a mere child. Why, it seems only a year ago that I was toting her about on my shoulders! And—by George, that was a year before her mother died! She is sixteen now."

Nathaniel laughed softly. "Tomorrow she will be making love, Nell, and before you know it she will be married and have a family of her own. I tell you she is a woman—and if you are not a fool you will take her away with Marion."

With a powerful stroke of his paddle Nell brought the canoe in to the shore.

"There!" he whispered. "You have only to cross this point to reach your boat." He stretched out his long arm and in the silence the two shook hands. "If you should happen to think of a way—that we might get Winsome—" he added, coloring.

The sudden grip of his companion's fingers made him flinch.

"We must!" said Nathaniel.

He climbed ashore and watched Nell until he had disappeared in the wild rice. Then he turned into the woods.

He looked at his watch and saw that it was only 2 o'clock. He was conscious of no fatigue; he was not conscious of hunger. To him the whole world had suddenly opened with glorious promise and in the still depths of the forest he felt like singing out his rejoicing. He had never stopped to ask himself what might be the end of this passion that had overwhelmed him; he lived only in the present, in the knowledge that Marion was not a wife, and that it was he whom fate had chosen for her deliverance. He reasoned nothing beyond the sweet eyes that had called upon him, that had burned their gratitude, their hope and their despair upon his soul; nothing beyond the thought that she would be free from the mysterious influence of the Mormon king and that for days and nights after that she would be on the same ship with him. He had emptied the pockets of the coat he had given Nell and now he brought forth the old letter which Obadiah had rescued from the sands. He read it over and over again as he sat for a few moments in the cool of the forest and there was no trouble in his face now. It was from a girl. He had known that girl, years ago, as Nell knew Winsome; in years of wandering he had almost forgotten her—until this letter came. It had brought many memories back to him with shocking clearness. The old folk were still in the little home under the hill; they received his letters; they received the money he sent them each month—but they wanted him. The girl wrote with merciless candor. He had been away four years and it was time for him to return. She told him why. She wrote what they, in their loving fear of inflicting pain, would never have dared to say. At the end, in a postscript, she had asked for his congratulations on her approaching marriage.

To Nathaniel this letter had been a torment. He saw the truth as he had never seen it before—that his place was back there in Vermont, with his father and mother, and that there was something unpleasant in thinking of the girl as belonging to another. But now matters had changed. The letter was a hope and inspiration to him and he smoothed it out with tender care. What a refuge that little home among the Vermont hills would make for Marion! He trembled at the thought and his heart sang with the promise of it as he went his way again through the thick growth of the woods.

It was half an hour before he came out upon the beach. Eagerly he scanned the sea. The Typhoon was nowhere in sight and for an instant the gladness that had been in his heart gave place to a chilling fear. But the direction of the wind reassured him. Casey had probably moved beyond the jutting promontory, that swung in the form of a cart wheel from the base of the point, that he might have seen room in case of something worse than a stiff breeze. But where was the small boat? With every step adding to his anxiety Nathaniel hurried along the narrow rim of beach. He went to the very tip of the point which reached out like the white forefinger of a lady's hand into the sea; he passed the spot where he had lain concealed the preceding day; his breath came faster and faster; he ran, and called softly, and at last halted in the arch of the cart wheel with the fear full-damning in his breast. Over all those miles of sea there was no sign of the sloop. From end to end of the point there was no boat. What did it mean? Breathlessly he tore his way through the strip of forest on the promontory until all Lake Michigan to the south lay before his eyes. The Typhoon was gone! Was it possible that Casey had abandoned hope of Nathaniel's return and was already lying off St. James with his shot gun? The thought sent a shiver of despair through him. He passed to the opposite side of the point and followed it foot by foot, but there was no sign of life, no distant flash of white that might have been the canvas of the sloop Typhoon.

There was only one thing for him to do—wait. So he went to his hiding place of the day before and watched the sea with straining eyes. An hour passed and his still night vision saw no sign of sail; two hours—and the sun was falling in a blinding glare over the Wisconsin wilderness. At last he sprang to his feet with a hopeless cry and stood for a few moments undecided. Should he wait until night with the hope of attracting the attention of Nell and joining him in his canoe, or should he hasten in the direction of St. James? In the darkness he might miss Nell, unless he kept up a constant shouting, which would probably bring the Mormons down upon him; if he went to St. James there was a possibility of reaching Casey. He still had faith in Obadiah and he was sure that the old man would help him to reach his ship; he might even assist him in his scheme of getting Marion from the island.

Where the Women Came In.

Two after the clerk placed before hard-to-please Percy. Red, yellow, blue, green, striped—all the colors of the rainbow. Some he liked and laid aside; others he returned to the salesman. But to Percy's great interest, the salesman did not return all the "rejected" to the boxes whence they had come. Many he placed together in one capacious tray.

"Aren't you putting that back in the wrong box?" exclaimed Percy, at last, his curiosity aroused, as yet another rejected was tossed into the box of failures.

"Oh, no," replied the man. "We have orders, when five or six men turn down a tie, to take it out and put it aside."

"And is it then returned to the makers?" queried Percy.

"Oh, dear, no! We sell them to ladies who come in here to buy ties for their husbands."

Didn't Like Course Dinners.

A colored woman, native of the south, had been working for a fat dwelling family of moderate means in the East end, but resigned recently to accept a place bringing higher wages with a wealthy family who lived in a large house on Euclid heights and have their dinner served in courses every night just as if there was company.

This colored woman had been brought up to put everything on the table at once, with the exception possibly of the dessert, and did not take kindly to the course system.

A few days ago her former mistress met her on the street and inquired how she liked her new place.

"Oh, not very well," she replied. "I don't like this way of serving things in courses. The's too much shiftin' o' the dishes to the fewness o' the vittles."

Matter of Principle.

"Is he lazy?"

"I would hardly say that. You've heard the expression: 'Unseemly haste?'"

"Why, certainly."

"Well, all haste looks that way to him."

ILLINOIS TRIBUNAL REFUSES WRIT IN ATTACK ON CONSTRUCTION OF ACT.

SPLIT ON THE DECISION

Court Divided, 4 to 3, in Its Opinion—Constitutionality of the Law Is Not Directly Passed Upon in the Ruling Handing Down.

Springfield, Ill.—Without passing on the question of the primary elections law's validity, a majority of the Illinois supreme court decided to refuse the writ asked in the proceeding attacking that act. As a consequence the action of the state canvassing board declaring the result of the recent primary election stands.

Following the decision of the court, the canvassing board directed that certificates of nomination issue to the men declared nominated, and Secretary of State Rose entered on the work of making up the state ticket. So far as the forthcoming election is concerned, at least, the last primary election was valid.

There is pending in the circuit court of Sangamon county another proceeding attacking the law, but this will not interfere with the election. Attorney General Stead will file a demurrer in the case at once. If it is decided adversely to the state an appeal will be taken and before the final adjudication the election will have been held.

The supreme court in giving its decision did so orally and did not state the grounds on which it had been decided to deny the petition of Joseph McInerney and Charles Espey.

Chief Justice Vickers made the announcement, together with a statement that the opinion was not unanimous.

"The nature of this case was such," he said, "that the court regarded it as an emergency, requiring an immediate determination. We have given it thorough consideration and a majority are of the opinion that the writ should be denied and this is the judgment of the court."

"The members thus agreeing are Justices Cook, Farmer, Hand and Vickers. The minority think the writ ought not to issue. An opinion will be filed hereafter, setting forth the reasons for the conclusion announced."

There was much disappointment in the court room when the court failed to announce whether its decision had been affected by consideration of the constitutional question involved. The assumption was, of course, that a majority of the court had upheld the constitutionality of the law, but it was pointed out that the denial of the petition did not necessarily involve this question.

"It does not follow because the court has sustained our contention," said Assistant Attorney General Woodward, "that it has sustained the constitutionality of the law. Even if it had declared the law unconstitutional, the prayer of the petitioners could not have been granted."

"It is possible the court has taken up only the one proposition and the majority has decided simply that, regardless of the constitutionality of the law, the petitioners were not entitled to places on the ticket. Our assumption is, however, that a majority of the court believes the law valid."

In the circuit court case filed by Walter Lantz, the proceeding is framed that the constitutional question may be directly raised. If the supreme court does not, in its forthcoming written opinion, take up and pass on this phase of the matter, it is possible that it will be brought before it on appeal. This will require time and it will not be possible to get a decision before the election.

When Lantz filed his suit in the circuit court it was not with the purpose of testing the law in that court.

"I have filed this suit," he said, "simply to protect any rights I may get through a supreme court decision favorable to McInerney and Espey. If the court should hold for them, it might include in its writ only their names, and other men who ran third might be left out."

Whether Lantz now will drop his proceedings probably will depend on what the supreme court indicates in its written opinion. If the court leaves the constitutional question open it may be made the basis for a final attack on the law and become something more important than a mere precautionary proceeding.

That party politics played no part in the decision given by the court is indicated by the division on the question of issuing the writ. Justices Vickers and Hand are Republicans. Justices Cook and Farmer are Democrats. The justices who took the minority view of the case, Cartwright and Carter, are Republicans. The other dissenter is Justice Dunn.

PHILADELPHIA DEFEATS CHICAGO IN INITIAL GAME OF WORLD'S SERIES.

PITCHER BENDER A WONDER

Mighty Crowd Goes Wild When Philadelphia Slabman Mows Down His Opponents With But Three Singles.

Philadelphia.—With Bender pitching magnificently, the Philadelphia American baseball team Monday defeated the Chicago Nationals in the first game of the world's series played here before a crowd numbering more than 25,000 persons, and won by a score of 4 to 1.

The game was a wonder in its way, and Chief Bender, who pitched for the Athletics, had the Chicagoans at his mercy up to the ninth inning, when he let down a bit and the Cubs got their single tally. It was not earned at that, as Tinker, who scored the run, was only enabled to make a single because Thomas had previously muffed a foul from his bat.

Only thirty men faced the Athletics' pitcher in the nine innings, and but three hits were made off his delivery, two of them coming in the ninth. The Athletics scored seven hits, six of which were scored off Overall, who was replaced by McIntire in the fourth inning.

McIntire proved to be effective at once. The Athletics were retired in one, two, three order for the first time during the game.

The Athletics' fielding was without a flaw until the final inning, when Thomas dropped Tinker's foul pop and Strunk later fumbled the same player's grounder to center. The Chicago team also feld well.

Bender was pitching the game of his life when the ninth inning opened. In the eight innings which had been played only twenty-four of the Cubs had faced his curves, and of these Schulte was the only man who could get to first. He did the trick twice—once with a single and once on four wide ones.

The Athletics scored two runs in the second inning and the enormous crowd went wild with enthusiasm. The Cubs had gone out one, two, three in their half. Baker, the first man up for the home team, lammed the very first ball Overall pitched into the crowd in left field for two bases.

A sacrifice by Davis took Baker to third, and he scored from there when Murphy cracked a single that shot over Steinfield's head. Murphy was able to steal second and Barry's sacrifice took him to third. Then, after Thomas had walked, Bender walloped a single to left, driving Murphy home. Strunk fled out.

The Athletics increased their lead in the third inning, when they scored a tally, making the score 3 to 0 in their favor. The Cubs had gone out one, two, three. Then the home players began to beat Overall. Lord led off with a two-bagger, took third on Collins' sacrifice and scored on Baker's single.

The Cubs were worried and Chance held a consultation with several of his men in the pitcher's box. They decided to let Overall continue, and he struck Davis out. Baker was caught, trying to steal second.

In the first half of the fourth inning the Cubs managed to get a man to first base. This was Schulte, who got a pass from Chief Bender. He got no further, however, as he was caught stealing for the third out.

In the last of the eight Baker got his second two-bagger into the crowd after Collins had walked and taken third on McIntire's wild throw, to catch him napping. Collins scored, making the total 4 to 0 in favor of the Athletics.

Mrs. Howe had been ill since Wednesday last, when she had a severe chill. Death was due to pneumonia. She was in her ninety-first year.

TERRIBLE SUFFERING ENDED

How An Allegan, Mich., Woman Regained Her Health.

Mrs. Robert Schwabo, R. F. D. No. 8, Allegan, Mich., says: "Doctors could not cure me and I was rapidly running into Bright's disease. Kidney secretions were like blood and I arose 8 to 10 times at night to void them. I became frightened at my condition. My sight began to fail and pains in my back were like knife thrusts. I cried for hours, unable to control my nerves. After I started using Doan's Kidney Pills, I began to feel better and soon I was cured. I am a living testimonial of their merit."

Tip for Tat.

Lloyd C. Griscom, in an interview in New York, said of party dissensions:

"They are animated by a nasty spirit, a tit-for-tat spirit; and they go from bad to worse."

"It's like the case of the engaged couple at the seaside dance. The young man, a little jealous, said coldly to his fiancée at supper:

"'Let me see—was it you I kissed in the conservatory?'"

"'About what time?'" the young girl answered, with a little laugh."

Like the Other Kind.

It was in a "down east" village that the young man met his sweetheart, a charming country beauty. When he returned to the city he sent her a jar of cold cream to keep her cheeks as fresh as the budding rose.

On his next visit he asked her how she liked his little gift.

"The taste was very nice," she said, with a rather sickly smile, "but I think that I like the other kind of cream best, dear."—Lippincott's.

Twenty-five million Red Cross Christmas Seals have been printed and are being distributed by the American Red Cross, and arrangements have been made to print 100,000,000 if necessary. It is expected that this number will be needed. While the sticker is perforated like those used last year, it is intended for use only as a seal on the back of letters. The seal is one inch square with the conventional Red Cross in the center and the words, "Merry Christmas, Happy New Year, American Red Cross" in a circle about it. The colors are red and green. The design is by Mrs. Gulon Thompson of Waterbury, Conn., who received $100 as a prize for her sketch.

The Place of Honor.

Farmer Hodge was of the good, old-fashioned school, and he always gave a feast to his hands at harvest time. It was harvest time and the feast was about to commence.

Giles was the oldest hand and the hostess, with beaming cordiality, motioned him to the seat by her right hand. But Giles remained silently unresponsive.

"Come," said the hostess, "don't be bashful, Mr. Giles"—he was just Giles on ordinary occasions—"you've a right to the place of honor, you know."

Giles deliberated a moment, then spoke.

"Thank you kindly, Mrs. Hodge," he said, "but if it's all the same to you, I'd rather sit opposite this pudding!"

COFFEE WAS IT.

People Slowly Learn the Facts.

"All my life I have been such a slave to coffee that the very aroma of it was enough to set my nerves quivering. I kept gradually losing my health but I used to say 'Nonsense, it don't hurt me.'"

"Slowly I was forced to admit the truth and the final result was that my whole nervous force was shattered."

"My heart became weak and uncertain in its action and that frightened me. Finally my physician told me, about a year ago, that I must stop drinking coffee or I could never expect to be well again."

"I was in despair, for the very thought of the medicines I had tried so many times nauseated me. I thought of Postum but could hardly bring myself to give up the coffee."

"Finally I concluded that I owed it to myself to give Postum a trial. So I got a package and carefully followed the directions, and what a delicious, nourishing, rich drink it was! Do you know I found it very easy to shift from coffee to Postum and not mind the change at all?"

"Almost immediately after I made the change I found myself better, and as the days went by I kept on improving. My nerves grew sound and steady, I slept well and felt strong and well-balanced all the time."

"Now I am completely cured, with the old nervousness and sickness all gone. In every way I am well once more."

It pays to give up the drink that acts on some like a poison, for health is the greatest fortune one can have.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in 100 pages. "There's a Reason."

Saying Grace.

I own that I am disposed to say grace upon twenty other occasions in the course of the day besides my dinner. I want a form for setting out upon a pleasant walk, for a moonlight ramble, for a friendly meeting, or a solved problem. Why have we none for books, those spiritual repasts—a grace before Milton—a grace before Shakespeare—a devotional exercise proper to be said before reading the "Faery Queen"—Charles Lamb.

Kickers.

What is odious but noise, and people who scream and bewail! People whose yane points always east, who live to die, who send for the doctor, who coddle themselves, who toast their feet on the register, who intrigue to secure a padded chair and a corner out of the draught. Suffer them once to begin the enumeration of their infirmities, and the sun will go down on the unfinished tale.—Emerson.

Ignore Him.

The best way to get rid of the mosquito, says the Brooklyn Eagle, is to get the habit of not minding him. Like the natives. No native or resident of a few months in a mosquito section minds mosquitoes any more than he does flies. But this method is slow in its appeal to the man who finds the pests attack him with more zeal than they do the natives.

Owner's Opportunity.

"I see you often in your automobile these days." "Yes. I have the use of it frequently. My new chauffeur is just landed and hasn't made many friends as yet."—Louisville Courier Journal.

A Test of Shakespeare.

A friend of father's told me that is the only test to apply in considering which parts of the doubtful plays are genuine. . . . "If you want to read it, it's Shakespeare; and if you don't, it isn't."—The Spectator.

Royal Way to Success.

Get the right thing—that is, the occupation you like—and then focus the best of your powers on it. Not once, but all the time. That is how others have done; it is the only royal way.

Would Be of Benefit Now.

The Jesuit fathers, who first came in contact with the American Indians in their primitive condition, know of over 200 varieties of plants which they were accustomed to eat. It is a great pity that the list was not preserved for the benefit and admonition of civilized man to follow.

Australian Rabbit Industry.

In many towns rabbit killing and freezing and preparing the skins for export is a growing asset of great value, especially during the winter season, when it enables men who have no other occupation to make a good living and spend considerable money at the country stores.

Wealth Buried With the Dead.

The Dyaks, besides the deceased's property, bury with him sometimes large sums of money and other valuables, so that it frequently happens that a father, unfortunate in his family, is by the death of his children reduced to poverty. And in some extinct societies of America nothing but the deceased's land, which they were unable to put into his grave, remained for his widow and children.

Cure for Crying Children.

An ingenious employment of the phonograph, by the way, was suggested by an inventor some time ago. This was for curing children of the habit of crying upon the slightest provocation. The child is made to cry into the instrument, and when he is calm the record is served up before the whole family. It is said to be a perfect cure.

Happiness Within Us.

Our happiness mainly depends on the freedom that reigns within us; a freedom that widens with every good deed and contracts beneath acts of evil. Not metaphorically, but literally, does Marcus Aurelius free himself each time he discovers a new truth in indulgence, each time that he pardons, each time he reflects.—Maeterlinck.

The Courage of Captain Plum

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

SYNOPSIS.

Capt. Nathaniel Plum, of the sloop Typhoon, lands secretly on Beaver Island, stronghold of the Mormons. He is suddenly confronted by Obadiah Price, an eccentric old man and a member of the Mormon council, who tells him that he is expected. Price ignores Nat's protestations that he has got the wrong man, and bargains for the ammunition aboard the sloop. He binds Nat by a solemn oath to deliver a package to Franklin Pierce, president of the United States. A young Price's cabin Nat sees the frightened face of a young woman who disappears in the darkness, leaving an odor of lilacs. It develops that Plum's visit to the island is to demand settlement from the king, Strang, for the looting of his ship some time previously, supposedly by Mormons. Casey, the mate, has been left in charge of the sloop with orders to bombard St. James if Nat does not return within a certain time. Price takes Nat in the darkness, to the king's home, and through a winding passage to the king and his wives, among whom is the lady of the lilacs, whom Price says is the seventh wife. Plum calls at the king's office, where he is warned by a young woman that his life is in danger. Strang receives Plum cordially, professes indignation when he learns of the king's wife, and promises to punish the guilty. Plum again receives warning of his danger. He rescues Nell, who is being publicly whipped. The king orders Croche, the sheriff and father of Winnie, to the girl who warned Nat, to pursue and kill the two men. Plum and Nell plan to escape on the Typhoon. Plum learns that Marion, the girl of the lilacs, is Nell's sister. She is not yet married to Strang. Plum suggests carrying her off on the ship. Nell approves.

Horror, not fear, sent an involuntary shiver through Nathaniel. "They can't reach us!" assured Nell. There was the glitter of triumph in his eyes. "This was to have been my way of escape after I killed Strang. A quarter of a mile deeper in the swamp I have a canoe." He picked up the gun and box and began forcing his way through the dense alder along the edge of the stream. "I'd like to stay and murder those dogs," he called back, "but it wouldn't be policy."

For a time the crashing of their bodies through the dense growth of the swamp drowned all other sound. Five minutes later Nell stopped on the edge of a wide bog. The hounds were giving fierce tongue in the forest on their left and their nearest sent Nathaniel's hand to his pistol. Nell saw the movement and laughed. "Don't like the sound, eh?" he said. "We got used to it on Beaver Island. They're just about at the place where they tore little Jim Schredder to pieces a few weeks back. Schredder tried to kill one of the elders for stealing his wife while he was away on a night's fishing trip."

He plunged to his knees in the bog. "They caught him just before he reached the swamp," he flung back over his shoulder. "Two minutes more and he would have been safe."

Nathaniel, sinking to his knees in the mire, forged up beside him. "Lord!" he exclaimed, as a breath of air brought a sudden burst of blood-curdling cries to them. "If they'd loosed them on us sooner—"

He shivered at the terrible grimace Nell turned on him.

"Had they slipped the leashes when we escaped, we would have been with poor Schredder now," Captain Plum. By the way—he stopped a moment to wipe the water and mud from his face—"three days after they covered Schredder's bones with muck out there, the elder took Schredder's wife! She was too pretty for a fisherman."

He started on, but halted suddenly with uplifted hand. No longer could they hear the baying of the dogs. "They've struck the creek!" said Nell. "Listen!"

After an interval of silence there came a long mournful howl.

"Tread—tread or in the water, that's what the howling means. How Croche and his devils are howling now!"

A curse was mingled with Nell's breath as he forced his way through the bog. Twenty rods farther on they came to a slimy covered bit of water on which was floating a dugout canoe. Immense relief replaced the anxiety in Nathaniel's face, as he climbed into it. At that moment he was willing to fight a hundred men for Marion's sake, but snakes and bogs and bloodhounds were entirely outside his pale of argument and he exhibited no hesitation in betraying this fact to his companion. For a quarter of a mile Nell forced the dugout through water viscid with slime and rotted substance before the clearer channel of the creek was reached. As they progressed the stream constantly became deeper and more navigable until it finally began to show signs of a current and a little later, under the powerful impetus of Nell's paddle, the canoe shot from between the dense shores into the open lake. A mile away Nathaniel discerned the point of forest beyond which the Typhoon was hidden. He pointed out the location of the ship to his companion.

"You are sure there is a small boat waiting for you on the point?" asked Nell.

"Yes, since early morning."

Nell was absorbed in thought for some time as he drove the canoe through the tall rice grass that grew thick along the edge of the shore.

"How would it be if I landed you on the point and met you tonight at Obadiah's?" he asked suddenly. "It is probable that after we get Marion aboard your ship I will not return to the island again, and it is quite necessary that I run down the coast for a couple of miles—for—" He did not finish his reason, but added: "I can make the whole distance in this rice so there is no danger of being seen. Or you might lie off the point yonder and I would join you early this evening."

"That would be a better plan if we must separate," said Nathaniel, whose voice betrayed the reluctance with which he assented to the project. He had guessed shrewdly at Nell's motive. "Is it possible that we may have another young lady passenger?" he asked hesitatingly.

There was no answering humor to this in Nell's eyes.

"I wish we might!" he said quietly. "We can!" exclaimed Nathaniel. "My ship—"

"It is impossible. I am speaking of Winnie. Arbor Croche's house is in the heart of the town and guarded by dogs. I doubt if she would go, anyway. She has always been like a little sister to Marion and me and she has come to believe—something—as we do. I hate to leave her."

"Obadiah told me about her mother," ventured Nathaniel. "He said that some day Winnie will be a queen."

"I knew her mother," replied Nell, as though he had not heard Nathaniel's last words. He looked frankly into the other's face. "I worshipped her!"

"From a distance," he hastened. "She was as pure as Winnie is now. Little Winn looks like her. Some day she will be as beautiful."

"She is beautiful now."

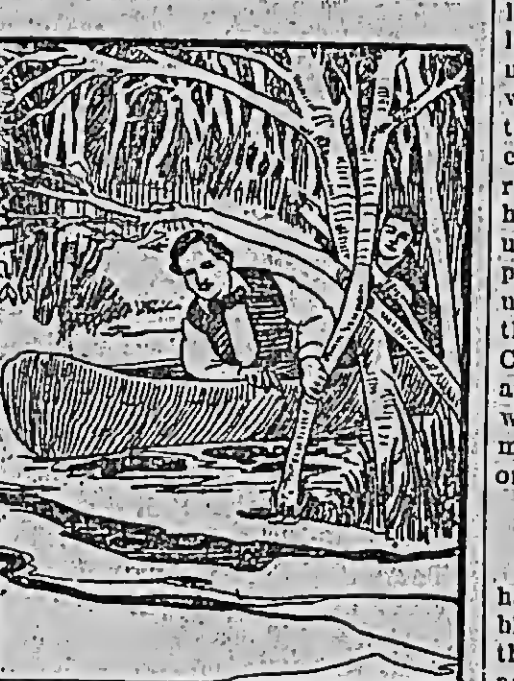

"But she is a mere child. Why, it seems only a year ago that I was toting her about on my shoulders! And—by George, that was a year before her mother died! She is sixteen now."

Nathaniel laughed softly.

"Tomorrow she will be making love, Nell, and before you know it she will be married and have a family of her own. I tell you she is a woman—and if you are not a fool you will take her away with Marion."

With a powerful stroke of his paddle Nell brought the canoe in to the shore.

"There!" he whispered. "You have only to cross this point to reach your boat." He stretched out his long arm and in the silence the two shook hands. "If you should happen to think of a way—that we might get Winnie—" he added, coloring.

Nell Forced the Dugout Through the Water.

The sudden grip of his companion's fingers made him flinch.

"We must!" said Nathaniel.

He climbed ashore and watched Nell until he had disappeared in the wild rice. Then he turned into the woods. He looked at his watch and saw that it was only 2 o'clock. He was conscious of no fatigue; he was not conscious of hunger. To him the whole world had suddenly opened with glorious promise and in the still depths of the forest he felt like singing out his rejoicing. He had never stopped to ask himself what might be the end of this passion that had overwhelmed him; he lived only in the present, in the knowledge that Marion was not a wife, and that it was he whom fate had chosen for her deliverance. He reasoned nothing beyond the sweet eyes that had called upon him, that had burned their gratitude, their hope and their despair upon his soul; nothing beyond the thought that she would soon be free from the mysterious influence of the Mormon king and that for days and nights after that she would be on the same ship with him. He had emptied the pockets of the coat he had given Nell and now he brought forth the old letter which Obadiah had rescued from the sands. He read it over and over again as he sat for a few moments in the cool of the forest and there was no trouble in his face now. It was from a girl. He had known that girl years ago, as Nell knew Winnie; in years of wandering he had almost forgotten her—until this letter came. It had brought many memories back to him with shocking clearness. The old folk were still in the little home under the hill; they received his letters; they received the money he sent them each month—but they wanted him. The girl wrote with merciless candor. He had been away four years and it was time for him to return. She told him why. She wrote what they, in their loving fear of inflicting pain, would never have dared to say. At the end, in a postscript, she had asked for his congratulations on her approaching marriage.

To Nathaniel this letter had been a torment. He saw the truth as he had never seen it before—that his place was back there in Vermont, with his father and mother; and that there was something unpleasant in thinking of the girl as belonging to another. But now matters had changed. The letter was a hope and inspiration to him and he smoothed it out with tender care. What a refuge that little home among the Vermont hills would make for Marion! He trembled at the thought and his heart sang with the promise of it as he went his way again through the thick growth of the woods.

It was half an hour before he came out upon the beach. Eagerly he scanned the sea. The Typhoon was nowhere in sight and for an instant the gladness that had been in his heart gave place to a chilling fear. But the direction of the wind reassured him. Casey had probably moved beyond the jutting promontory, that swung in the form of a cart wheel from the base of the point, that he might have seen room in case of something worse than a stiff breeze. But where was the small boat? With every step adding to his anxiety Nathaniel hurried along the narrow rim of beach. He went to the very tip of the point which reached out like the white forefinger of a lady's hand into the sea; he passed the spot where he had lain concealed the preceding day; his breath came faster and faster; he ran, and called softly, and at last halted in the arch of the cart wheel with the fear full-flaming in his breast. Over all those miles of sea there was no sign of the sloop. From end to end of the point there was no boat. What did it mean? Breathlessly he tore his way through the strip of forest on the promontory until all Lake Michigan to the south lay before his eyes. The Typhoon was gone! Was it possible that Casey had abandoned hope of Nathaniel's return and was already lying off St. James with his shot gun? The thought sent a shiver of despair through him. He passed to the opposite side of the point and followed it foot by foot, but there was no sign of life, no distant flash of white that might have been the canvas of the sloop Typhoon.

There was only one thing for him to do—wait. So he went to his hiding place of the day before and watched the sea with straining eyes. An hour passed and his still aching vision saw no sign of sail; two hours—and the sun was falling in a blinding glare over the Wisconsin wilderness. At last he sprang to his feet with a hopeless cry and stood for a few moments undecided. Should he wait until night with the hope of attracting the attention of Nell and joining him in his canoe or should he hasten in the direction of St. James? In the darkness he might miss Nell, unless he kept up a constant shouting, which would probably bring the Mormons down upon him; if he went to St. James there was a possibility of reaching Casey. He still had faith in Obadiah and he was sure that the old man would help him to reach his ship; he might even assist him in his scheme of getting Marion from the island.

Where the Women Come In. To after the clerk placed before hard-to-please Percy. Red, yellow, blue, green, striped—all the colors of the rainbow. Some he liked and laid aside; others he returned to the salesman. But to Percy's great interest, the salesman did not return all the "rejected" to the boxes whence they had come. Many he placed together in one capacious tray.

"Aren't you putting that back in the wrong box?" exclaimed Percy, at last, his curiosity aroused, as yet another rejected was tossed into the box of failures.

"Oh, no," replied the man. "We have orders, when five or six men turn down a tie, to take it out and put it aside."

"And is it then returned to the makers?" queried Percy.

"Oh, dear, no! We sell them to ladies who come in here to buy ties for their husbands."

Didn't Like Course, Dinners. A colored woman, native of the south, had been working for a flat dwelling family of moderate means in the East end, but resigned recently to accept a place, bringing higher wages with a wealthy family who lived in a large house on Euclid heights and have their dinner served in courses every night just as if there was company.

This colored woman had been brought up to put everything on the table at once, with the exception possibly of the dessert, and did not take kindly to the course system.

A few days ago her former mistress met her on the street and inquired how she liked her new place.

"Oh, not very well," she replied. "I don't like this way of serving things in courses. The table's too much shifflin' o' the dishes to the fewness o' the vitties."

Matter of Principle. "Is he lazy?"

"I would hardly say that. You've heard the expression: 'Unseemly haste?'"

"Why, certainly."

"Well, all haste looks that way to him."

ILLINOIS TRIBUNAL REFUSES WRIT IN ATTACK ON CONSTRUCTION OF ACT.

SPLIT ON THE DECISION

Court Divided, 4 to 3, in Its Opinion—Constitutionality of the Law Is Not Directly Passed Upon in the Ruling Handing Down.

Springfield, Ill.—Without passing on the question of the primary election law's validity, a majority of the Illinois supreme court decided to refuse the writ asked in the proceeding attacking that act. As a consequence the action of the state canvassing board declaring the result of the recent primary election stands.

Following the decision of the court the canvassing board directed that certificates of nomination issue to the men declared nominated, and Secretary of State Rose entered on the work of making up the state ticket. So far as the forthcoming election is concerned, at least, the last primary election was valid.

There is pending in the circuit court of Sangamon county another proceeding attacking the law, but this will not interfere with the election. Attorney General Stead will file a demurrer in the case at once. If it is decided adversely to the state an appeal will be taken and before the final adjudication the election will have been held.

The supreme court in giving its decision did so orally and did not state the grounds on which it had been decided to deny the petition of Joseph McInerney and Charles Espey.

Chief Justice Vickers made the announcement, together with a statement that the opinion was not unanimous.

"The nature of this case was such," he said, "that the court regarded it as an emergency, requiring an immediate determination. We have given it thorough consideration and a majority are of the opinion that the writ should be denied and this is the judgment of the court."

"The members thus agreeing are Justices Cook, Farmer, Hand and Vickers. The minority think the writ ought not to issue. An opinion will be filed hereafter, setting forth the reasons for the conclusion announced."

There was much disappointment in the court room when the court failed to announce whether its decision had been affected by consideration of the constitutional question involved. The assumption was, of course, that a majority of the court had upheld the constitutionality of the law, but it was pointed out that the denial of the petition did not necessarily involve this question.

"It does not follow because the court has sustained our contention," said Assistant Attorney General Woodward, "that it has sustained the constitutionality of the law. Even if it had declared the law unconstitutional the prayer of the petitioners could not have been granted."

It is possible the court has taken up only the one proposition and the majority has decided simply that, regardless of the constitutionality of the law, the petitioners were not entitled to places on the ticket. Our assumption is, however, that a majority of the court believes the law valid.

In the circuit court case filed by Walter Lantz, the proceeding is so framed that the constitutional question may be directly raised. If the supreme court does not, in its forthcoming written opinion, take up and pass on this phase of the matter, it is possible that it will be brought before it on appeal. This will require time and it will not be possible to get a decision before the election.

When Lantz filed his suit in the circuit court it was not with the purpose of testing the law in that court. "I have filed this suit," he said, "simply to protect my rights I may get through a supreme court decision favorable to McInerney and Espey. If the court should hold for them, it might include in its writ only their names, and other men who ran third might be left out."

Whether Lantz now will drop his proceedings probably will depend on what the supreme court indicates in its written opinion. If the court leaves the constitutional question open it may be made the basis for a final attack on the law and become something more important than a mere precautionary proceeding.

That party politics played no part in the decision given by the court is indicated by the division on the question of issuing the writ. Justices Vickers and Hand are Republicans. Justices Cook and Farmer are Democrats. The justices who took the minority view of the case, Cartwright and Carter, are Republicans. The other dissenter is Justice Dunn.

PHILADELPHIA DEFEATS CHICAGO IN INITIAL GAME OF WORLD'S SERIES.

PITCHER BENDER A WONDER

Mighty Crowd Goes Wild When Philadelphia Slabman Mows Down His Opponents With But Three Singles.

Philadelphia.—With Bender pitching magnificently, the Philadelphia American baseball team Monday defeated the Chicago Nationals in the first game of the world's series played here before a crowd numbering more than 25,000 persons, and won by a score of 4 to 1.

The game was a wonder in its way, and Chief Bender, who pitched for the Athletics, had the Chicagoans at his mercy up to the ninth inning, when he let down a bit and the Cubs got their single tally. It was not earned at that, as Tinker, who scored the run, was only enabled to make a single because Thomas had previously muffed a foul from his bat.

Only thirty men faced the Athletics' pitcher in the nine innings, and but three hits were made off his delivery, two of them coming in the ninth. The Athletics scored seven hits, six of which were secured off Overall, who was replaced by McIntire in the fourth inning.

McIntire proved to be effective at once. The Athletics were retired in one, two, three order for the first time during the game.

The Athletics' fielding was without a flaw until the final inning, when Thomas dropped Tinker's foul pop and Strunk later fumbled the same player's grounder to center. The Chicago team also fielded well.

Bender was pitching the game of his life when the ninth inning opened. In the eight innings which had been played only twenty-four of the Cubs had faced his curves, and of these Schulte was the only man who could get to first. He did the trick twice—once with a single and once on four wild ones.

The Athletics scored two runs in the second inning and the enormous crowd went wild with enthusiasm. The Cubs had gone out one, two, three in their half. Baker, the first man up for the home team, lammed the very first ball Overall pitched into the crowd in left field for two bases.

A sacrifice by Davis took Baker to third, and he scored from there when Murphy cracked a single that shot over Steinfeld's head. Murphy was able to steal second and Barry's sacrifice took him to third. Then, after Thomas had walked, Bender walloped a single to left, driving Murphy home. Strunk fled out.

The Athletics increased their lead in the third inning, when they scored a tally. Making the score 3 to 0 in their favor. The Cubs had gone out one, two, three. Then the home players began to find Overall. Lord led off with a two-bagger, took third on Collins' sacrifice and scored on Baker's single.

The Cubs were worried and Chance held a consultation with several of his men in the pitcher's box. They decided to let Overall continue, and he struck Davis out. Baker was caught, trying to steal second.

In the first half of the fourth inning the Cubs managed to get a man to first base. This was Schulte, who got a pass from Chief Bender. He got no further, however, as he was caught stealing for the third out.

In the last of the eighth Baker got his second two-bagger into the crowd after Collins had walked and taken third on McIntire's wild throw to catch him napping. Collins scored, making the total 4 to 0 in favor of the Athletics.

JULIA WARD HOWE EXPIRES

Author of "Battle Hymn of the Republic" Dies of Pneumonia at Middletown, R. I.

Middletown, R. I.—One of the world's most famous women, the venerable Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, poet and patriot, and staunch advocate of human liberty everywhere, passed peacefully away Monday at her summer home, "Oak Glen," in Middletown.

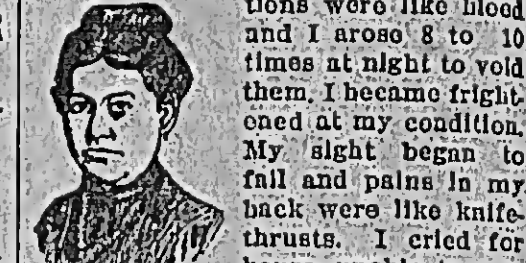

Mrs. Howe had been ill since Wednesday last, when she had a severe chill. Death was due to pneumonia. She was in her ninety-first year.

Thirty-Five Miners Fall; Six Killed. Horno, Westphalia, Prussia.—A basket carrying 35 miners dropped to the bottom of the shaft in the Shamrock colliery Monday, when the supporting rope snapped. Six of the men were killed. All the others were injured, some seriously.

Turkey in Need of Money. Constantinople.—The Turkish government is facing a financial crisis. Three members of the cabinet resigned Monday because of complications over the army budget.

TERRIBLE SUFFERING ENDED

How An Allegan, Mich., Woman Regained Her Health.

Mrs. Robert Schwabe, R. F. D. No. 8, Allegan, Mich., says: "Doctors could not cure me and I was rapidly running into Bright's disease. Kidney secretions were like blood and I arose 8 to 10 times at night to void them. I became frightened at my condition. My sight began to fail and pains in my back were like knife thrusts. I cried for hours, unable to control my nerves. After I started using Doan's Kidney Pills, I began to feel better and soon I was cured. I am a living testimonial of their merit."

Remember the name—Doan's. For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Millburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Tit for Tat. Lloyd C. Griscom, in an interview in New York, said of party dissensions:

"They are animated by a nasty spirit, a tit-for-tat spirit; and they go from bad to worse."

"It's like the case of the engaged couple at the seaside dance. The young man, a little jealous, sold cold to his fiancée at supper."

"Let me see—was it you I kissed in the conservatory?"

"About what time?" the young girl answered, with a little laugh.

Like the Other Kind. It was in a "down east" village that the young man met his sweetheart, a charming country beauty. When he returned to the city he sent her a jar of cold cream to keep her cheeks as fresh as the budding rose.

On his next visit he asked her how she liked his little gift.

"The taste was very nice," she said, with a rather sickly smile, "but I think that I like the other kind of cream best, dear."—Lippincott's.

May Sell 100,000,000 Red Cross Stamps. Twenty-five million Red Cross Christmas Stamps have been printed and are being distributed by the American Red Cross, and arrangements have been made to print 100,000,000 if necessary. It is expected that this number will be needed. While the stamps are perforated like those used last year, it is intended for use only as a seal on the back of letters. The seal is one inch square with the conventional Red Cross in the center and the words, "Merry Christmas, Happy New Year, American Red Cross" in a circle about it. The colors are red and green. The design is by Mrs. Sutton Thompson of Waterbury, Conn., who received $100 as a prize for her sketch.

The Place of Honor. Farmer Hodge was of the good, old-fashioned school, and he always gave a feast to his hands at harvest time. It was harvest time and the feast was about to commence.

Giles was the oldest hand and the hostess, with beaming cordiality, motioned him to the seat by her right hand. But Giles remained silently unresponsive.

"Come," said the hostess, "don't be bashful, Mr. Giles—he was just Giles on ordinary occasions—you're a right to the place of honor, you know."

Giles deliberated a moment, then spoke.

"Thank you kindly, Mrs. Hodge," he said, "but if it's all the same to you, I'd rather sit opposite this pud-dle!"

COFFEE WAS IT. People Slowly Learn the Facts.

"All my life I have been such a slave to coffee that the very aroma of it was enough to set my nerves quivering. I kept gradually losing my health but I used to say 'Nonsense, it don't hurt me.'"

"Slowly I was forced to admit the truth and the final result was that my whole nervous force was shattered."

"My heart became weak and uncertain in its action and that frightened me. Finally my physician told me, about a year ago, that I must stop drinking coffee or I could never expect to be well again."

"I was in despair, for the very thought of the medicines I had tried so many times nauseated me. I thought of Postum but could hardly bring myself to give up the coffee."

"Finally I concluded that I owed it to myself to give Postum a trial. So I got a package and carefully followed the directions, and what a delicious, nourishing, rich drink it was! Do you know I found it very easy to shift from coffee to Postum and not mind the change at all!"

"Almost immediately after I made the change I found myself better, and as the days went by I kept on improving. My nerves grew sound and steady. I slept well and felt strong and well-balanced all the time."

"Now I am completely cured, with the old nervousness and sickness all gone. In every way I am well once more."

It pays to give up the drink that acts on some like a poison, for health is the greatest fortune one can have. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in page. "There's a Reason."

Saying Grace.

I own that I am disposed to say grace upon twenty other occasions in the course of the day besides my dinner. I want a form for setting out upon a pleasant walk, for a moonlight ramble, for a friendly meeting, or a solved problem. Why have we none for books, those spiritual repasts—a grace before Milton—a grace before Shakespeare—a devotional exercise proper to be said before reading the "Faery Queen"?—Charles Lamb.

Kickers.

What is odious but noise, and people who scream and bewail! People whose vain points always east, who live to dine, who send for the doctor, who coddle themselves, who toast their feet on the register, who insist to secure a padded chair and a corner out of the draught. Suffer them once to begin the enumeration of their infirmities, and the sun will go down on the unfinished tale.—Emerson.

Ignore Him.

The best way to get rid of the mosquito, says the Brooklyn Eagle, is to get the habit of not minding him, like the natives. No native or resident of a few months in a mosquito section minds mosquitoes any more than he does flies. But this method is slow in its appeal to the man who finds the pests attack him with more zeal than they do the natives.

Wealth Buried With the Dead.

The Dyaks, besides the deceased's property, bury with him sometimes large sums of money and other valuables, so that it frequently happens that a father, unfortunate in his family, is by the death of his children reduced to poverty. And in some extinct societies of America nothing but the deceased's land, which they were unable to put into his grave, remained for his widow and children.

Cure for Crying Children.

An ingenious employment of the phonograph, by the way, was suggested by an inventor some time ago. This was for curing children of the habit of crying upon the slightest provocation. The child is made to cry into the instrument, and when he is calm the record is served up before the whole family. It is said to be a perfect cure.

Happiness Within Us.

Our happiness mainly depends on the freedom that reigns within us; a freedom that widens with every good deed and contracts beneath acts of evil. Not metaphorically, but literally, does Marcus Aurelius free himself each time he discovers a new truth in indulgence, each time that he pardons, each time he reflects.—Master, flack.

Owner's Opportunity.

"I see you often in your automobile these days." "Yes. I have the use of it frequently. My new chauffeur is just landed and hasn't made many friends as yet."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Test of Shakespeare.

A friend of father's told me that is the only test to apply in considering which parts of the doubtful plays are genuine. . . . "If you want to read it, it's Shakespeare; and if you don't, it isn't."—The Spectator.

Royal Way to Success.

Get the right thing—that is, the occupation you like—and then focus the best of your powers on it. Not once, but all the time. That is how others have done; it is the only royal way.

Would Be of Benefit Now.

The Jesuit fathers, who first came in contact with the American Indians in their primitive condition, knew of over 200 varieties of plants which they were accustomed to eat. It is a great pity that the list was not preserved for the benefit and admonition of civilized man to follow.

Australian Rabbit Industry.

In many towns rabbit killing and freezing and preparing the skins for export is a growing asset of great value, especially during the winter season, when it enables men who have no other occupation to make a good living and spend considerable money at the country stores.

Stenography.

To a limited extent the art of shorthand writing, known as stenography, was practised by the ancients. The freedmen of the Ptolemaic, Cleopatra, Seneca and other literary men of Rome, are known to have resorted to shorthand. The oldest known system since the Roman days is that called the "Ars Scribendi," dating from the year 1412. Dr. Timothy Bright's system, the first English work on shorthand, dates from about 1588. Since then the approaches have been steady toward the greatly improved methods of the present day.

Misjudged Brilliant Son.

Lord Amphil of once found Bismarck reading Anderson's story on the Ugly Duckling, which relates how a duck hatched a swan's egg, and how the cygnet was jeered at by his putative brethren, the ducklings, until one day a troop of lordly swans, floating down the river, saluted him as one of their race. "Ah," observed Bismarck, "It was a long time before my poor mother could be persuaded that in hatching me she had not produced a goose."

Olive Oil to Remove Clinder.

The man with the clinder in his eye was suffering great pain. Every one had a different method of relief to suggest, but nothing had the desired effect. At length one of the bystanders procured a little olive oil from the lunch room. This was poured into the eye and relief was instant. "I learned that method of dealing with clinders while abroad," said the bystander, "and I guess it is about as effective as anything after all."

If you were fitted ten years ago in a suit of a certain material, send for the same number and we will send it-same materials, same careful workmanship, and about the same price. Quality so good that it is kept up, and kept up to make you sure of each suit you buy, is the biggest guarantee that you will be satisfied.

Staley Underwear or Staley Overshirts are sold to you at jobbers prices, the price being controlled by the factory. You get it for what other merchants pay for it.

If it were possible for us to ask more for this fine underwear you would be glad to pay it. To hold the agency we must sell at prices quoted by the makers. It's better for you because you buy it for just what other merchants would have to pay for it. And think of the quality-the best on the market.

In order to get this underwear to its friends in outlying towns, and where express will be delivered, we PREPAY EXPRESS CHARGES, providing remittance is sent with order.

What might have proved a disastrous fire was averted by a timely discovery Thursday morning at about half past two o'clock. Hurriedly calling Mr. Shultis they entered the building and found that a fire had started in the back room and had already burned a large hole in the floor. Dynamiter, Himself a Married Man, Knew What Awaiting Forgetful Husband.

The business man was sitting in his office, thinking of starting for home, when a suspicious looking person came in with a leather bag in his hand.

"If you don't give me $25," said the visitor, coming at once to the point, "I will drop this on the floor."

The business man was cool. "What is in it?" he asked.

"Dynamite," was the brief reply. "What will it do if you drop it?"

"Blow you up,"

"Drop it!" was the instant command. "My wife told me when I left home this morning to be sure and send up a bag of flour, and I forgot it. I guess it will take just about as much dynamite as you have there to prepare me for the blowing up I'll get when she sees me!"

He threw himself back in his chair and waited for the explosion, but it did not come.

"I'm a married man myself," said the dynamiter, and quietly slipped out.—Illustrated Bita.

History of Red Cross Seal. "Charity stamps," first used in Boston in 1862 for the soldiers' relief fund during the Civil war, were the original forerunners of the Red Cross Christmas seal, which will be used this year to bring happiness and cheer to millions. The Delaware Anti-Tuberculosis society in 1907 for the first time in America made use of a stamp for the purpose of getting revenue to fight consumption. In a hastily organized campaign of only three weeks they realized $3,000. The next year, 1908, the American Red Cross conducted the first national tuberculosis stamp campaign. From this sale $135,000 was realized for the anti-tuberculosis movement. In 1909, under many adverse conditions, $250,000 was realized from these stamps. This year the slogan of the tuberculosis fighters and the Red Cross is "A Million for Tuberculosis From Red Cross Seals in 1910."

He Knew. A small boy brought up by a fire-eating father to hate anything connected with England or the English was consigned recently to eat dinner with the nurse while the family entertained a gossamer English lord in the dining room. The grown-ups' meal had come to that "twenty minutes past" stage where conversation halts directly, when a childish trouble fell upon the dumb-waiter shaft from the kitchen. This is what the astounded nobleman heard:

"Fo, n, fo, fum, I smell the blood of an Englishman."—Wasp.

DOLLIVER CALLED BY DEATH IN IOWA HOME

Progressive Republican Senator Passes Away Suddenly of Dilatation of the Heart--His Vitality Was Weakened by Campaign in Wisconsin--Gave Life for His Country--Was Famed as an Orator.

Fert Dodge, Ia.—United States Senator Jonathan Prentiss Dolliver died suddenly Saturday night at his residence while being treated by an osteopathic physician.

The cause of death was dilatation of the heart, due directly to an attack of acute indigestion. It had been believed that he had almost entirely recovered from the attack of indigestion from which he had been suffering for a week, but his exertions in the political campaign had weakened his vitality.

Physician Hears End Come. While working over the senator the physician, Dr. E. M. Van Patton, used an instrument to listen to the heart action. He had counted 14 regular strokes and had informed his patient.

Two more strong heartbeats were recorded and then two faint ones. Then the physician heard nothing. He thought for an instant that his stethoscope was faulty. He glanced up and discovered that his patient was dead.

It was learned that a consultation of physicians was held a week ago. The decision then was that the senator might prolong his life by relinquishing his work, but that he never again would speak in the senate or thrill an audience from public platform.

Gave Life to Country. Dr. A. H. McCreight, one of the consulting physicians, declared to Mrs.

declaring, however, that the senator must give up his public work.

He himself repeatedly said that he was not seriously ill, declaring that if he were he would "set the wolves howling" and admitting that he had a horror of knowing that the politicians were discussing his successor while he was ill, on the theory that he might die.

Talk of Successor. Nevertheless, within an hour after the senator's death, the question of who his successor would be was the theme of general discussion in political circles. It is predicted that Governor Carroll will not appoint any person to fill the vacancy, for the legislature about to be elected will convene within eight of ten weeks. Governor Carroll is a candidate for re-election, and it is believed by many that he will leave it to the legislature to fill the vacancy.

Dolliver's Life Story. Jonathan P. Dolliver was born in 1838 near Kingwood, Preston county, W. Va. He was the son of a minister in the mountain district. He had to pay part of his own way through West Virginia university because his circuit riding father's income was small.

At seventeen, when the boy had won his graduation diploma, he began the study of law and was admitted to the

JONATHAN P. DOLLIVER.

Dolliver that her husband had given his life to his country as much as had any soldier who had been killed on the battlefield.

Mrs. Dolliver said the senator, while in Washington last winter, studied the tariff schedules constantly, far into the night, taking little time to eat and then going back to work immediately. Such work told on his physical powers, undermining his naturally rugged constitution.

Death cut short Mr. Dolliver's plans to help Senator Beveridge in the Indiana campaign and to aid Senator Clapp in Minnesota. At the state convention he declared he would enter every one of the 99 counties in Iowa, whether invited or not, to speak in support of the state ticket. He met Colonel Roosevelt at Omaha on the latter's recent western trip and accompanied the former president to Sioux City. From there he returned to Fort Dodge. It was his last campaign work.

Believed He Would Recover. During his illness the senator and his wife insisted that there was nothing serious in his ailment, and the physicians expressed the same belief.

A RARE SHEEP OPPORTUNITY

Enormous Receipts at Market—Farmers and Sheep Feeders Can Stock Up at Bargain Prices.

CAUSES OF THE RUN.

200,000 sheep and lambs received in three days—such, in round numbers, is the record-breaking run thus far this week on the Chicago market.

This enormous over-marketing of sheep is the result of temporary and peculiar causes, and offers a rare opportunity for farmers and sheep feeders to stock up at bargain prices.

This great rush of sheep to market comes mainly from Montana and adjoining western range country, and cannot last more than two or three weeks longer. It is no evidence of over-production. Its principal causes are the recent drought, which has burned out the grass that there will be very little winter feed on the range, and which prevented the putting up of sufficient hay to carry any considerable number of sheep over winter, while last winter was a very severe one and hay was so closely fed that there is no old hay left over for the purpose. The consequence is that sheep owners are forced to market the bulk of their sheep this fall, or else lose them in the fierce storms of winter.

The most serious cause of the present general liquidation, however, is the restriction of the range through occupation and fencing by dry farmers, who are grain growers, and not live stock raisers. The tremendous rush of these settlers upon the range within the last three years, and especially within the last twelve months, is hard for eastern people to realize. It is not alone the area actually enclosed by these settlers, but the breaking up thereby of vast regions of grazing lands into such small sections that they are no longer available to stockmen for grazing their flocks, which is one of the main reasons why the sheep supplies of the western range country are being more closely marketed this year than ever before in the history of the trade.

This means an inevitable shortage at market later on and next year, and with a constantly growing demand for both mutton and wool, it would seem that future good prices are assured.

The western range country has heretofore been the chief source of sheep, market supplies, but unless the farmers of the corn belt begin at once to raise many more sheep than they have ever done before, there will be a great scarcity of both mutton and wool before long in this country.

Moreover, there is a world-wide shortage of live stock of all kinds. All Europe is short of sheep, and even Australia's supply is declining with rapidity. The same general causes that exist in this country are operating in other countries also. Populations are growing rapidly everywhere, while grazing areas are being reduced. As pasture land is turned to production of cereals, sheep raising declines.

Thousands of American farmers can turn this situation to their benefit, through increase of both soil fertility and money profit, by beginning right now each to keep a small flock of sheep upon his farm. And by taking advantage of the present opportunity to buy healthy, thrifty, growing western range sheep at bargain prices upon the heavily supplied Chicago market, they can stock up at minimum cost, whether they want foundation stock for breeding or the growing kind to fatten for market.

Prudent Bridegroom. "The uncertainties of life in New York are reflected in wedding rings," said the jeweler. "Of all the wedding rings I have sold this season more than half were brought back after the ceremony to have the date put on. The rest of the inscription was engraved when the ring was purchased, but in order that the date might be correct it was cautiously omitted until after the knot was tied."

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach. A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Plummer's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

CONVINCING PROOF

OF THE VIRTUE OF

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

What is the use of procrastinating in the face of such evidence as the following letters represent? If you are a sick woman or know one who is, what sensible reason have you for not giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? For 30 years we have been publishing such testimonial letters as these—thousands of them—they are genuine and honest, too, every one of them.

Mrs. S. J. Barber says:

"I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best medicine in the world for women—and I feel it my duty to let others know the good it has done for me. Three years ago I had a tumor which the doctor said would have to be removed by an operation or I could not live more than a year, or two, at most. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for advice, and took 14 bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today the tumor is gone and I am a perfectly well woman. I hope my testimonial will be of benefit to others."—Mrs. S. J. BARBER, Scott, N. Y.

Mrs. George May says:

"No one knows what I have suffered from female troubles, neuralgia, pains, and backache. My doctor said he could not give me anything to cure it. Through the advice of a friend I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the pain soon disappeared. I continued its use and am now in perfect health. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a God-send to me as I believe I should have been in my grave if it had not been for Mrs. Pinkham's advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. GEORGE MAY, 80 4th Ave., Paterson, N. J.

Mrs. E. F. Hayes says:

"I was under the doctor's treatment for a fibroid tumor. I suffered with pain, soreness, bloating, and could not walk or stand on my feet any length of time. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice, followed her directions and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. To-day I am a well woman, the tumor was expelled and my whole system strengthened. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 1800 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

Mrs. W. K. Housh says:

"I have been completely cured of a severe female trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and want to recommend it to all suffering women."—Mrs. W. K. HOUSH, 7 Eastview Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female illness, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, etc.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Discard Pension Papers.

The Washington pension office is house cleaning. Naasty picked clerks, who are supposed to know the value of records, have been engaged in the stupendous task of sorting out and destroying all correspondence and records that can never be of any further use in the adjudication of pension claims. It is estimated that the total will amount to at least 200 tons. For this paper mill contractors pay approximately six dollars a ton. The records go back as far as 1862, but some of them are of recent data.

The American woman has been reared upon a false conception, she thinks. Has been set upon a pedestal and worshipped and has come to believe that she is a superior sort of being. She questions whether the talkative, self-assertive American girl is as well fitted for the work of the world as the English and German girls.
